THE DRIVE THAT FAILED.

After all the hurrah, the promoters of the wheat pool failed to get in the specified time signatures representing one-half the land in the province that was under wheat last year. The aggregate fell short of the fifty per cent. by upwards of a quarter of a million acres. To control half the acreage of the present year the amount still required would be 100,000 acres more. The failure was certainly not due to lack of energy, organization or money. There was no want of "steam" behind the drive, nor of co-ordinated and directed effort. The machinery of the United Farmers' organization, the finances of the province, and enthusiasm without precedent, were linked to attain the objective. The wheat growing areas of the province were covered by a farm to farm canvass. From the international boundary to Peace River and from the foothills to the Saskatchewan border, the solicitors have been busy. They had the favoring condition that a heavy crop is being reaped and that prices are not too low to keep the growers from buying. There had been no want of preparatory advertising, and an atmosphere had been created which gave every prospect of success. Signatures were acceptable from men who are not growing wheat this year, from men who are not actually farming at all, from men who own land who are working it. The signatures were everywhere, no argument that could be supposed to be effective with the individual is made clear by the reports. The hope of higher prices, loyalty to the U.F.A., the co-operative ideal, and threats that the man who stayed out would not be able to sell his wheat at all, were employed as levers as occasion required to secure members of the pool.

That the result is surprising cannot be concealed. Mr. Wood and his associates and the newspapers backing the scheme have been shouting from the house-tops that more than the required number of names would be secured. Explanations, of course, are in order, and are forthcoming in rich variety. It is explained that the farmer was too busy driving the binder that he just hadn't time to stop long enough to write his name on the dotted line. Several other excuses of about the same degree of plausibility are offered. But one admission is made by the Calgary Albertan, which probably touches the fact of the matter. The Albertan says a good many farmers shied away from the five-year contract—with its iron clad provisions, its obligations all upon one side and irreversibility upon the other. That is the most likely-sounding of all the hypotheses offered to account for the fact that not enough farmers and land owners could be got to sign the document. The wheat-growers, it appears, refused to be stampeded in the unanimous way that was hoped and aimed at. A good many of them found time to read the contract, or refused to sign until they had studied it. The "don't read, don't think, just sign" slogan failed to go with the sweep intended. The conclusion is that the men owning or working more than half the land there was in wheat last year are "from Minto" on the pool question, and wanted to be shown—among other things how they were going to pull through this winter on two-thirds of the price of their wheat and an unguaranteed promise that they would get some more money some other time. And further, just why they should tie themselves and their land up for five years to a trading agency that as yet has no facilities for either buying wheat or storing it, and which has thus far failed to show the services of any recognized competent man to manage its operations. A pool is sometimes easier to get into than to get out of, and five years is a long time to stay in if the water turns out to be chilly.

But the project is to go on, so it is announced. Under the self-constructed constitution the provisional directors have authority to proceed with the enterprise though the certified percentage of last year's wheat land is not yet reached by the signatures. How many of those who signed will withdraw during the period of grace remains to be seen.

be seen. Unless they all quit, the contract seems to mean that a pool can be operated with the wheat of so many as remain. And that is already declared to be the intention of the directors. The prospect of success in the circumstances is less good than had the stipulated number of members been secured. Control of the whole crop of Alberta would not put the pool in position to dictate prices to the people of Great Britain. Control of less than half the crop will not put it in position to control anything but the wheat of the members. That it will do, for the next five years. The expense of operation will in these conditions be heavier in proportion to the wheat handled, than if the amount were larger. Which means that whatever the pool member stood to get for his wheat if half the wheat land in the province were under control, he stands to get something less with less than that amount of the land under control. The inducement to those who have signed to get out is correspondingly stronger than the inducement which led more than half the wheat-growers to stay out. A minority of producers cannot run a monopoly, and only in proportion as a pool is a monopoly is it likely to make money for the shareholders.

THE MONEY BYLAWS.

Two money bylaws are to be submitted to the burgesses on Monday. One is to provide $60,000 with which to re-pave Alberta avenue; the other calls for $20,000 with which to pay the city's share of the cost of sidewalks and crossings. Both objects are in keeping with the purpose for which civic organization exists. Sidewalks and crossings we must have, and they cannot be got without money. For many years little or nothing was done either by way of construction or repair and a vast amount of replacement is necessary to make the existing walls serviceable or even safe. As for Alberta avenue the pavement which was laid a number of years ago, has gone badly to pieces. It is now a nuisance rather than a convenience, and is positively dangerous to traffic. As in the case of our dilapidated sidewalks, the choice seems to be to do the renewing now or to take chances on having to pay damages for injuries—paid and unpaid—the cost of repairs also. The addition to the civic debt will be considerable, though a trifle in comparison, but it is probably better to make the inevitable expenditure now than run the risk of having to pay for accidents and in the end make the outlay as well. Of course, taxes are high and every mill counts, but while the city is spending money to make pools for people to swim in it would have a desperate time persuading a court that it cannot find money with which to keep sidewalks and pavement in safe condition. On the principle that it is better to choose the lesser of two evils it would seem to be advisable to vote the money and avoid the penalty.

NONE TOO MUCH.

Professor Swanson of the University of Saskatchewan, addressing a gathering at Saskatoon the other day, dealt with the question of over production of wheat. "Many," he said, "have come forward with solutions for the West's problem. Some say less grain production is the cure, while others hold that the question is purely one of marketing. In a way both are right. But let me state right here that there has never been a time when there was an over-production of wheat. Europe's trouble is that her people are under-nourished. They need more wheat food." That is one solid fact that cannot be got too clearly in mind in this country. Because we grow more wheat than we know what to do with the supposition arises that there is more of it in the world than can be eaten. That is not a fact, and never has been a fact. What is called the world surplus of wheat is not the amount of it over and above what is needed for food, but the amount of it that cannot be paid for and therefore has to be done without. If we are to sell more wheat to Europe we will have to give up the idea of selling it at a higher price, unless the classes in Europe which cannot afford to eat wheat come to enjoy a prosperity they have never yet known. If the market there is to enlarge it will have to expand downward, not upward.

STILL AT LARGE.

The police of Toronto and Ontario and a brigade of private detectives employed by the Bankers' Association are still wondering where they might lay hands upon the bandits who shot four people on one of the city streets about a month ago and made away with a grip full of money. The thing was done in broad daylight and in one of the busy parts of the city, conditions which would seem to make escape difficult and capture almost certain. But as yet the officers mean fairly likely to rank with the disappearance of Ambrose Small as an unsolved puzzle. It does not follow that the officers charged with the enforcement of law in that city and province are particularly lax or inept. The fast running motor car has provided the hold-up man with a means of escape that he has used successfully on a good many other equally spectacular occasions. Perhaps it would be easier to frustrate the modern robber agent by keeping money out of his reach than by trying to catch him after he has stolen it.

MENTAL MUSH

A COLUMN FOR THE COMMON PEOPLE

The Riverside school contract has been awarded, the price being $35,880. From a most unreliable source it is learned that the $35 was paid for the changing of the school time two or three times.

Here is a chance for G.W.V.A. members who possess an inventive turn of mind. As at present circumstances stand, the city is in a position to secure a number of various city improvements, are treated by the city as an expense. If they are not run over them, they simply turn the car around and drive back up in front of the sign. If, however, the notice could be coupled in some mechanical way to a machine gun, bomb thrower or flamethrower, it would help a whole lot. The city would be a lot more or less defunct, but here is an opportunity to acquire fame and fortune.

Weather Notes. SUMMER has passed leaving no many more people than usual, and winter is not far off. The cold wind will blow from the north in winter. The cold wind will blow from the north in winter. The cold wind will blow from the north in winter.

The great muddy condition of the Saskatchewan is a menace to the settlement of the province. All the time under the necessity of washing their noses.

It is easy to see that Old Bill is a troublemaker. He would not be allowed to pass the one. The only way to do this is to have a "bill" to which is attached the name of the one who is the troublemaker. No troublemaker is allowed to think about what they are doing.

To those who are tired of reading "Dear old London," Edmonton is a better place to live. The city is a better place to live. The city is a better place to live.

Home Notes. What if we find we can get the boy's money out of the window? ... If a boy's money is out of the window, it is out of the window. If a boy's money is out of the window, it is out of the window.

The average man's idea of hell is a hot place. It is a hot place. It is a hot place. It is a hot place.

changes on the city for the life of the pavement—20 years. To secure the best of the city is being improved because of the fact, and it is hoped that the work should be clear. OLD FIDDLER FOUND BY FORD AND EDISON

Zip Bibbee, at 81 Years of Age, Will Play His Jigs and Quicksteps
for the Gramophone

ZIP BIBBEE, an old fiddler, steps into fame at 81 years of age.

Thomas A. Edison and Henry Ford discovered him. Since everybody will be hearing Bibbee on the gramophone.

It was in the course of their summer outing that Edison and Ford came upon the old man at Paris, Michigan. For more than fifty years Zip had fiddled in the town square, and he had been a union and fair time Paris, Mich., has been famous for its square dances, jigs and reels of the eternal music.

Whereupon Mr. Edison decided to perpetuate for all time the merry tunes that roll from old Zip's fiddle. He has invited Bibbee to New Jersey to play into records just like Krieger does.

"I am going and I shall play just what they want, and my tunes date back 100 years," Zip says.

Henry Ford has negotiated for one of Zip's handmade fiddles and the price agreed is $100. It is even rumored that Ford is going to buy an automobile. It will be "made in Detroit" and it will come from Mr. Ford.

It was a big day in Paris when the notables arrived. Seven big automobiles ranging from limousines to trucks were in the town square. They were loaded with passengers and tents and driven by a group of men in khaki uniforms.

Paris, Mich., has been famous for its square dances, jigs and reels of the eternal music. It was a big day in Paris when the notables arrived. Seven big automobiles ranging from limousines to trucks were in the town square.

A crowd gathered to give the caravan the once or twice over, and somebody suggested that "that guy in the back seat looks like Zip Ford."

"That is Henry Ford," by George, it was the assertion from another. "And that next to Mrs. Ford—and say—read that Thomas Edison and Harvey Firestone are with him. That's news."

"By George, it is!" At this the man in the back seat asked the crowd if anyone knew the way to Zip Bibbee's home. The crowd said "yes," "yes," "yes," and pointed the way, and in a moment Mrs. Bibbee, 77 years old, was smiling on the doorman in Zip's home and saying:

"Mr. Ford? Why, yes, of course. And Mr. Edison? Of course. I will go and get my husband and have him play for you. Zip is right in."

Zip Bibbee played. He is at his best when he faces an audience. He fiddled the old reels, the old quicksteps and the old jigs until the visitors felt it seems he had been playing for forty years ago. He told Mrs. Bibbee about it.

"Mr. Ford said: 'Do you feel like playing a little?' and I said, 'Yes, I feel like playing any time.' So I started in. Before he got away he got looking at his violin. 'I will give you $100 for that violin,' he said, and put the money down on the table. He is coming back for it later."

"Mr. Edison got right down on his knees and said, 'You know—see if all my measures were correct. I took pains to—' that the record was right. I was so excited more than usual. I played those music—music you back you can't get it now, and somebody said: 'It seems so good to hear that old music. I'll give you $100 for that violin.'"

"And after that, Mr. Edison got talking about me going down there. He wanted me to play so everybody can hear it. I am going to it."

Just before Mr. Ford left Bibbee he said: "I'm a man driven up here by the way of the way, you don't tell him to take it away, will you?"

When Margot Says "Wait," She Means to Be Obeyed

"When I Tell My Daughter to Wait She Waits," But She Didn't

MRS. ARQUITTS welcome home to her daughter, Princess Bibbee, at Southampton, a few days ago, was a case of life and death.

Mrs. Arquitt had welcomed her daughter aboard the Olympic to wait on board. When she arrived the ship lay deserted at the dock side, but Mrs. Arquitt postponed the suggestion of officials that her daughter had gone ashore.

"When I tell my daughter to wait for me, she waits," was her terse comment.

But a moment later she discovered the princess' child. A torrent of exclamation words with the demure assurance that the princess really had gone to her home.

Margot, now thoroughly annoyed, and smoking feverishly, even slipped in her car and turned back into the hotel.

"Where is the Princess Bibbee?" she asked the porter.

But also, the porter knew neither Margot nor her daughter.

He completely mislaid Mrs. Margot, that when the princess appeared round the corner, she collapsed into her arms, overcome by such a variety of emotions as even veritable Margot could not cope with.

Beautiful Woods
The amateur painter was digging away at the woods in the picnic park. Said his neighbor, "What a hardy work with the woods so thick, doesn't it?"

"No, it's easier. You don't have to walk far to the next wood," he answered.

Mr. Ferguson Says 'Gid-dap' To a Very Balty Launch

Slipped Overboard Into the Rideau River and Towed Passengers to Shore
By His Teeth

YOU never know what you can do until you get up against it, but when you get up against it you'll find it's a lot easier than you think.

That is a sentence which Hon. G. Howard Ferguson used more than one occasion during his strenuous election campaign, when, for instance, he was going along on two meetings a day, a hundred miles or so of motoring and a half a dozen hours of sleep.

That was the spirit which he put into the campaign, and it accounts to a great extent for the remarkable fight which he put up, not only during the big drive, but for years before.

As further illustration of his disposition to beat down opposition, he was caught on the Rideau river in a difficult situation.

Mr. Ferguson had a gasoline launch, thirty feet long, and he had taken out a party of five ladies. Then, towards evening, the engine declined to carry on, while the boat was in the middle of the river, with the result that the party were made to do his own carrying-on. Here is how he did it.

He calmly slipped overboard into the water, took the tow-ropes in his teeth, and tried to swim. For a time he just made the motions, then at length the bally launch began to move, and so he carried on, swimming upon his back until he towed the thirty-foot and its five passengers safely to the shore, a hundred yards distant.

ENGLISH GIRLS WON'T KISS WEALTHIER BACHELOR

Sir Philip Sassoon Gets Absolute Refutation
of Allegation That Modern English Girls Are Too Forward

SIR PHILIP SASSOON, M.P., who is said to be the richest bachelor in England, and whose magnificent estate near Epsom was admired by thousands of Canadians who trained at Epsom and neighboring camps, is a distinguished member of the House of Commons.

English women like you, when you arrive, like you, and you like you at it. English women like you, when you arrive, like you, and you like you at it.

"Ah, Fautner," he continued, "I am not one of those who, under the pressure of these things, you would want to stay in England, not nearly ten years, but for your life."

Sir Philip rather pessimistically said that if the women present would allow it that custom of the women, he would be for one word vote the few hours' success.

The result was an absolute refutation of the allegation that the modern English girl is too forward. The wealthiest bachelor in England left the fete having had no charming life upturned to him.

When I Tell My Daughter to Wait She Waits, But She Didn't

MRS. ARQUITTS welcome home to her daughter, Princess Bibbee, at Southampton, a few days ago, was a case of life and death.

Mrs. Arquitt had welcomed her daughter aboard the Olympic to wait on board. When she arrived the ship lay deserted at the dock side, but Mrs. Arquitt postponed the suggestion of officials that her daughter had gone ashore.

"When I tell my daughter to wait for me, she waits," was her terse comment.

But a moment later she discovered the princess' child. A torrent of exclamation words with the demure assurance that the princess really had gone to her home.

Margot, now thoroughly annoyed, and smoking feverishly, even slipped in her car and turned back into the hotel.

"Where is the Princess Bibbee?" she asked the porter.

But also, the porter knew neither Margot nor her daughter.

He completely mislaid Mrs. Margot, that when the princess appeared round the corner, she collapsed into her arms, overcome by such a variety of emotions as even veritable Margot could not cope with.

Beautiful Woods
The amateur painter was digging away at the woods in the picnic park. Said his neighbor, "What a hardy work with the woods so thick, doesn't it?"

"No, it's easier. You don't have to walk far to the next wood," he answered.

Incident Trekking Into Canada With His Father Inherited Whole of Jack Miner's Life

JACK MINER, the well known naturalist, who today, has become famous throughout Canada as "the bird man" tells the following anecdotes of his life.

Born in Ohio, of humble parentage, father decided to move northward and make for himself and family a home in western Ontario.

Before leaving, a friend asked him if he thought he could make a living up there. He replied, "I think I can, and make a life. These words were indelibly impressed on Miner's young mind and have an influence for good on his whole life, he says.

"During a certain little time," he continued, "my father inquired how many saloons were to be found there and on being told he said, 'This is the place for my boys to start life in.' We boys were gathered in and the caravan rolled on.

He still laughs as he tells of a remark made by a girl one day while riding on the train. "That fellow," she said, "has more freckles than a toad has warts."

As beauty is only skin deep this remark caused him little worry.
